3. Guiding Principles of Recruitment

Quality of Employment

The Institution is committed to create a sustainable workforce of highly qualified faculty and staff, to provide a positive environment of work and employment for all concerned and one that encourages balancing work and personal commitments of its employees.

Compensation, Reward and Recognition

The Institution's compensation program is administered fairly and equitably strengthening the tie between pay, performance and organizational success.

Continuous Learning and Development

The Institution values and supports continuous learning, while understanding that continual learning is a core responsibility of each teaching staff member. To that end, it will provide structured development that integrates institutional mission, organizational and individual needs, and performance expectations.

Response to Change

The Institution is constantly preparing itself for the challenges of the future requirements of its students. In doing so, during periods of changing needs, the Institution creates opportunities for teaching staff members to acquire the needed skills to continue to advance the mission of the Institution.

During times of changes necessary for the Institution's growth, wherever reduction or change in the nature of the workforce is required, the Institution will rely on attrition, to the extent possible.

In support of these guiding principles, the Institution commits adequate resources for equitable support of employee development, compensation, reward and recognition across all levels and classifications of employees.

4. Recruitment Rules

The institution will issue paper advertisement for recruiting teaching and non-teaching posts in leading print media and conduct interviews and make appointment based on merit and recommendations of the selection committee as per the UGC/AICTE regulations.
