4. COMMONLY USED TOOLS AND STRATEGIES IN GENDER AUDITING

The analysis of the responses of students, Teaching Staff & Non Teaching Staff with regard to admission, programme planning and examination results and survey is conducted among all the stake holders. The Gender Audit meticulously examines various facets of gender dynamics within the educational institution:

I. Gender classification in Teaching Staff:

This section analyzes the gender distribution among teaching faculty members, considering factors such as departmental representation, hierarchical positions, and administrative roles. It aims to uncover potential gender-related disparities in salary, promotion rates, and access to leadership roles.

II. Gender classification in Non-Teaching Staff:

Similar to the teaching staff analysis, this segment focuses on the gender composition within the non-teaching workforce, including administrative, support, and maintenance staff. Understanding gender imbalances is crucial for addressing inequalities across all operational areas.

III. Gender classification in various social categories for UG students:

This part examines gender dynamics alongside other social categories among undergraduate students, such as race, ethnicity, socioeconomic status, and disability. The goal is to identify nuanced patterns of gender disparities and privileges to inform targeted interventions and support services.

IV. Gender-wise students registered and passed in UG programs:

Enrollment and success rates of male and female undergraduate students are scrutinized, considering retention, graduation, and academic performance indicators. Qualitative insights gathered through surveys or focus groups provide context for understanding gender-based outcomes in academic pursuits.

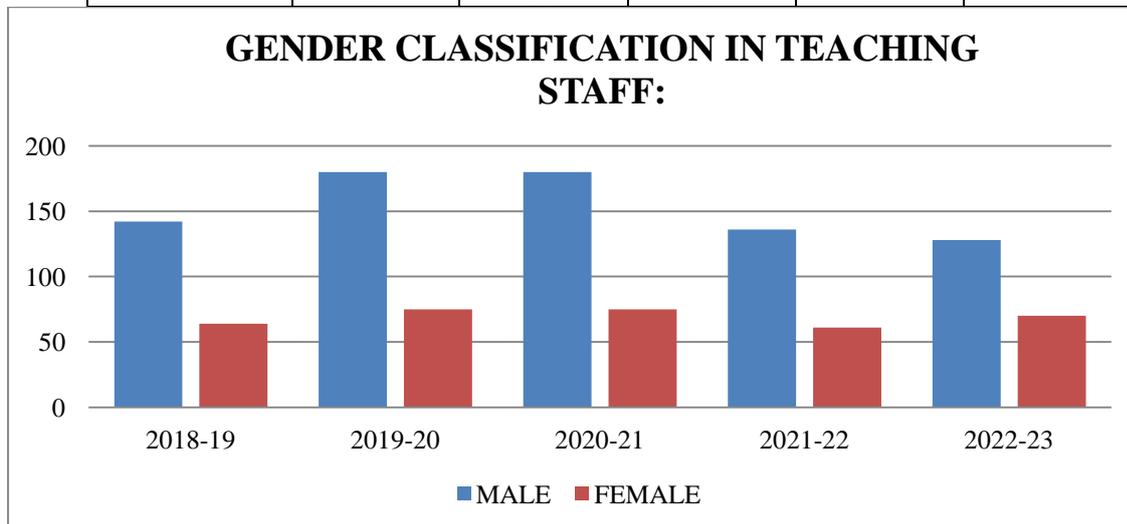

V. Survey conducted at the college level:

This component involves designing and administering a comprehensive survey to capture stakeholders' experiences and perspectives. Feedback from students, faculty, staff, and alumni on gender equity, inclusivity, and campus climate fosters transparency and informs evidence-based policy-making and institutional reforms.

In essence, the Gender Audit's data analysis qualitatively explores gender dynamics within the educational landscape. By examining institutional practices, policies, and cultural norms through an intersectional lens, the audit identifies opportunities for fostering a more equitable and inclusive learning environment, driving transformative change across all operational aspects.

The presence of a women's cell within the college, along with female faculty members, is recognized by 85.3% and 87.6% of students, respectively, indicating institutional support for gender-related concerns. While students generally feel free to reach out to the women's cell (74.6%), the establishment of a grievance redressal cell (77.8%) further ensures avenues for addressing gender-related issues. Overall, the college is commended for offering equal opportunities to all genders in classrooms, sports, clubs, and forums, with 94.3%, 88.5%, and 89.0% of students acknowledging this inclusivity, respectively.

However, to further enhance gender equality, it is recommended to continuously strengthen gender sensitization efforts, maintain and improve facilities, and encourage open dialogue to address any emerging concerns effectively.

Recommendations:

1. Strengthen and expand gender sensitization and awareness programs to ensure all students understand and respect gender equality.
2. Ensure maintenance and availability of adequate toilet facilities for female students.
3. Enhance campus lighting and security measures to improve safety, particularly at night.
4. Offer more flexible timing options to accommodate the needs of female students.
5. Promote the women's cell and increase awareness among students about its services.
6. Ensure the grievance redressal cell is accessible and responsive to concerns related to gender equality.
7. Foster an inclusive environment in classrooms, sports, clubs, and forums to provide equal opportunities for all genders.
8. Encourage and support free and fair expression of ideas among all students, regardless of gender.
9. Regularly assess and address any emerging gender-related issues on campus to maintain a supportive and inclusive environment for all students.
